Comments:

@@@I am appalled at the thought of yet another attempt to take our hard-earned money. As a federal employee, I am required to have direct deposit of my pay. Banks are notorious for including such information in the small print in places so full of highly technical and complex information that they are reasonably sure it will not be noticed. Now, if I wish to use some of my money from my account, I'm going to have to pay the bank for the use of it? That's just absurd. I am reaching the point that I may just withdraw most of my earnings and keep it at home. How will the banks like not having the use of my money? Imagine what would happen if more people did that!
